The Marijuana/Cannabis industry just came into full bloom with a major online resource for one of the American's fastest-growing industries. CannaFo.com has harnessed technology to become the world's first comprehensive online directory, marketplace, news portal, growing advice resource and social media platform.

CannaFo.com is the 'world's most comprehensive source for all things cannabis,' according to CannaFo President, Kelly Martin.

CannaFo.com's Home page opens with three broad areas of interest, focusing on Consumers, Business and Growers/Producers. The site is a free service designed to bring the world of medicinal and recreational cannabis, and all of its related products and industries into one place.

Oregon voters approved Measure 91 on November 4, 2014, effectively legalizing the private use, possession and cultivation of limited amounts of marijuana; Oregon joins Alaska, Washington and Colorado as one of four states allowing recreational use.

Starting October 1, 2015, limited amounts of recreational marijuana (flower and dry leaf products, plants, and seeds) became available for purchase through medical marijuana dispensaries to adults 21 and older.
